The Department of Water and Sanitation has once again allowed young people in the Eastern Cape to showcase their talents at this year's South African Youth Water Prize (SAYWP).

Themba Gade, a grade 11 learner from Attwel Madala High School, Mthatha participated in the finals of the competition and presentment his water cycling project. Teacher Molly Nhamburo from Attwel Madala High School said "this idea of water recycling using mechanical recycler lead her learner to think outside the box. He related to the his project in that in his village there had no water and they had to travel a long distance to fetch water from the river. The project was close to his heart".

Madala added that his commitment and positive participation in educational projects at school makes him an ambassador for water.

The SAYWP aims at providing an opportunity to the learners to learn more about use of water, how to protect water sources and how to practice water safety and it is targeting learners from grade 9 and 11.
