

A reminder to be water-wise

DURING this year's National Water Month in March, South Africans are encouraged to continue to use water sparingly and conserve it in their households.

Water Month, an expansion of World Water Day, is observed annually on March 22 to advocate for the sustainable management of freshwater resources.

The National Water Month theme for this year is "Leveraging Water for Peace", which encourages communities to use water as a tool for peace when co-operating over this precious shared resource.

South Africa will commemorate National Water Week from March 21-27, with advocacy programmes focusing on educating and conscientising all South Africans to make a difference by changing the way they use, consume and manage water in their lives.

The month of March is also Human Rights Month, and the South African constitution guarantees every person's right to have access to sufficient water.

As water is a basic right, the Department of Water and Sanitation is working tirelessly through infrastructure development and management of water resources to ensure South Africa is water-secure.

The department is determined to find innovative solutions to ensure water security and conservation, as well as to reduce the severity of pollution, climate change, and floods and droughts.

Let us also protect our rivers and streams and keep them free from pollution, as they are our source of fresh water we are entitled to as a country.

NTHABISENG DHLAMINI | Communicator at the National Department of Water & Sanitation