REPLY:

- (a) Yes, adequate systems are in place to maintain records of additions to buildings through the office accommodation filing system. There is also an office accommodation database that is updated regularly and corresponds with a database of the Department of Public Works as the custodian of office accommodation.
- (b) Yes, adequate systems are in place to maintain records of additions to other fixed structures through an Asset Register. The Asset Register is updated regularly including, revisiting prior year error. A process flow has been drafted and signed off that also deals with management of fixed structures in terms of accounting thereof.
